State is seeking coaches to assist under-performing schools

JUNEAU -- The Alaska Department of Education & Early Development is seeking proposals from experienced Alaskan educators and administrators to share their expertise as State System of Support school improvement coaches.

As contractors of the department, the coaches work to assist under-performing schools improve instruction and student performance. The ideal coach must have Alaskan teaching or administrative experience and knowledge of current research and best practices in curriculum, assessment, instruction, supportive learning environment, professional development, and leadership.

The state is looking to fill three vacancies in its State System of Support coaching program prior to its first meeting in August. More information can be obtained by contacting procurement officer Rob Roys at robert.roys@alaska.gov.

The deadline for receipt of proposals is July 23, 2015, at 4:00 p.m. The request for proposals is accessed at:
